

OE and ME cunte in place-names

Journal of the English Place-name Society, 41, 26-39 (2009)

Despite much discussion of the modern word, mysteries remain, both linguistic and sociological. Is it native OE, or borrowed from ON? Has the modern taboo always existed? I consider that the place-name evidence can contribute to these questions. However, there has not yet been a convenient corpus of all the surviving material. OED cites the street-name Gropecuntelane from Oxford c.1230 as its earliest record, but to evaluate this we need to know the frequency of occurrence and dates of all such names. The aim of this paper is to assemble the corpus (Figure 2), and make some general observations.

A relation to Latin cunnus is very doubtful for reasons of historical phonology. Cunnus perhaps shares a stem with culus; the latter is recorded in Britain in a Roman-period graffito from Leicester: EQUA G | ELLA CVLO, a curse probably meaning ‘mare G, that arse’ (Wilson and Wright 1964: 182) [1]. The Latin terms uerētrum and pudendus, both used for ‘genitalia’ are contradictory when taken literally, since they are built on the stems of uereor ‘to be in awe of’ and pudeō ‘to make ashamed’ [2]. They are thus circumlocutions, an interesting fact in itself, and probably reflecting an ambiguity of attitude which has always existed. The oft-cited ON kunta is actually recorded twice only, as the by-name of a certain Rognvaldr who appears in the sagas Heimskringla and Fornmanna (Lind 1920–1: 226). The meaning is deduced from that of the same word in more recent Scandinavian dialects. A runic inscription does in fact record the word kunt, but this is probably an error for knut(r) (Petersen 2002: s.n. Knūtr). Given that German kunte is grammatically feminine (DWB: s.v. kunte), and the fact that the unique recorded OE form cuntan (discussed below) has a weak ending, ON kunta probably belongs to the weak ōn declension (of the saga type) and is thus feminine, and the OE form is probably cunte (fem.) rather than cunta (masc.).

The existence of numerous by-names recorded in the medieval period would argue against a taboo operating then: for example Clawecuncte in the Winton Domesday (von Feilitzen 1976: 210) [3], and names such as Clevecunt, Cruskeunt, Fillecunt, Twycheunt and Sittebid'cunte; these are discussed in Reaney (OES: 294-5), McClure (1981: 98), and Postles (1999: 119-120,125). Similar personal names occurs in Bele Wydecunthe 1328 (SibEst: 67) and in the field-name Bluther-cuntesaker c.1289 (Sib3: 108).

Other 'rude words' recorded in place-names include fockynggroue in Bristol 1373 (Coates 2007); OE ears occurs with euphemistic alteration in Ashgrove Farm (W), which was (to) erse grafan 955 (PN W: 208); OE buttuc occurs in the charter S:977 of Cnut of c.1022: of þam wege on þa buttucas . of þam buttucon on þone broc; ME pisse occurs in Pisswelle 13th (Underwood 2008: 36); OE bealluc or ME ballok occurs in two Derbyshire names: Bullock Low in Hartington Balloklow 1415 (PN Db 2: 370) and the lost Ballocporn 1275 (PN Db 2: 342), and non-topographically in Sandford Orcas (< OF Oriescuilz 'golden ballocks' (PN Do 3: 389)). These examples are sufficient to establish that we should not be surprised to find cunte. Though cunte and counte are common ME spellings for "count" (nobleman), this term is very rare in English place-names; cf. the affixes Le Cunte 1252, le Counte 1324, Comitis 1451 of Swaffham Bulbeck and S~ Prior (PN C: 133-4). The long stem vowel would have distinguished it in speech. Countesthorpe (Lei; Watts (CDEPN)) and Counterslip (Bristol; Smith (PN Gl 3: 87)) are from 'countess', but Countisbury (PN D 1: 62) is not [4].

Modern discussions have concentrated on the use in swearing (Allan and Burridge 2006; Montagu 1967; Sagarin 1962), and are sometimes influenced by feminist theory (Muscio 1998). For an interesting male analogue, see Cooper (2008). For the French con, see Rey (DHLEF: s.v. con), where it is claimed that a taboo has operated since the mid-17th century.

I now discuss the individual place-names. Names printed in italic do not survive on the modern map.

cuntan heale: a charter of King Edgar (S683, AD 960) refers to a place in Bishopstoke (Hampshire) called (to) cuntan heale (dative). Another charter (S360, AD 900) in giving bounds for the estate of Durley apparently refers to the same place, but this charter has been shown to be a later forgery (Brooks 1982; Miller 2001: 25). The location, as confirmed by the detailed study of Currie (1995), must be near SU 514 187, next to the East Horton golf course. There is no notable topographical feature here, but two small streams do meet at an elongated field, and this might in some way be responsible for the name (Figure 1).

Grundy (1924: 82-86) avoids giving a translation, but just writes "... hollow"; for Brooks (1982), the meaning is 'cunt-hollow'; for Currie (1995: 105) the meaning is 'Cuntan's hollow', a grammatical impossibility; while for Miller (2001: 25), it is 'cuntish hollow'. On page 233, he states "This word occurs in Old English only in the phrase cuntan healh". This is thus the only recorded pre-Conquest use of the word [5] [6].

Gropecuntlane: This street-name is recorded in about twenty places; all have now become Grape Lane or similar, or have been completely lost.

- Oxford (O): Gropecuntelane c.1230, now Grove Passage and Magpie Lane (PN O 1: 40)
- Northampton (Nth): Gropecuntelane 1274 (PN Nth: 8)
- London: Gropecontelane 1279, Gropecounte Lane 1276 (1279) (SNCL: 164)
- Wells (So): Gropecuntelane c1260-1333 (Scrase n.d. [1989]: 105)
- Shrewsbury (Sa): Gropecountelane 1304, now Grope Lane (PN Sa 4: 5)

- Great Yarmouth (Nf): Gropecuntelane 1299; last recorded 1514 (PN Nf 2: 32)
- Norwich (Nf): Gropecuntelane 1305; Turpis Vicus 1333; now Opie St. (PN Nf 1: 122)
- Windsor (Brk): Gropecountelane 1315 (PN Brk 1: 29)
- Stebbing (Ess): Gropecountelane c.1325 (PN Ess: 457)
- York (YW): Grapcunt Lane 1328-9, Gropcunt Lane 1376, now Grape Lane (SNCL: 164; PN YE: 289)
- Reading (Brk): Gropequeyntelane 14th (PN Brk 1: 172)
- Cambridgeshire (C): an unlocated Gropecuntlane 1472 is given by Reaney (PN C: 337)

- Bristol (Gl): Gropecountlane 1480 (later Hallier's Lane, later and now Nelson Street (ex inf. R. Coates) (Worcestre 2001: §46). This is just Gropelane in the same source at §373, §375, and §411-2.
- Shareshill (St): Gropcuntlane 1513 (PN St 1: 119)
- Grimsby (L): Gropecunt Lane 1529 (PN L 5: 77-8)
- Newcastle (Nb): Grapecuntlane 1588 (Holt and Baker 2001: 212)
- Banbury (O): Gropecunt lane n.d. (Holt and Baker 2001: 210)

Note that we also have:

- Hereford: Gropelane 1368 (Holt and Baker 2001: 209)
- Hedon: Grape Lane 1432, Grape Gate 1840 (PN YE: 40)
- Shaftesbury: Cropelane 1475 (PN Do 3: 148)
- Chipping Barnet: Gropelane 15th? (PN Hrt: 71)
- Peterborough: Gropelane 1500 (PN Nth: 225)
- Wareham: Groupe, Groop St. 18th (PN Do 1: 155)
- Worcester: Grope lane n.d. (PN Wo: 23; SNCL: 164)

There are modern Grape Streets or Lanes in Leeds, Leicester, Halifax, Keighley, Durham, Whitby, and Pocklington, which may be suspected of having the same origin, but data on early spellings is lacking. For Grape Street in Leicester, Cox (PN Lei 1: 38) speculates about a name from an inn. A discussion of the geography of some of these streets and a possible connection to prostitution has been given by Holt and Baker (2001).

We note the earliest instance in Oxford, and the others are concentrated in major ecclesiastical centres that would be likely destinations of Oxford-educated clerics (London, Norwich, Wells, York, Bristol); thus I suggest the name originates as academic slang. Another monogenetic street-name is probably Finkle Street; Coates (1995) proposes that it spread from an original in York. There is a slight complication here due to the existence of OE grōp, grēop, with the meaning 'drain, ditch'. Sweet (OET: 98) gives scrobibus groepum (dat. plur.), and Sweet (OET: 73) has latrina groepe atque ductus cloaca; that is, a sewer in the modern sense. A specialized meaning was ‘a central channel for urine in a cow-shed’. Furthermore, cuniculum also had the meaning ‘sewer’ in medieval Latin and perhaps here the cun- element provided a basis for punning. This word has numerous dialect derivatives — grip, grape, greap, gripe, groop, griup, grupe etc. (EDD: s.vv. grip, groop), and has been claimed as the origin of Group St. in Wareham 18th (PN Do 1: 155) and Cropelane 1475 in Shaftesbury (PN Do 3: 148). It seems a remote possibility that the streets now called Grope or Grape Lane were named from a ditch in the middle of the road, and that the addition of a middle syllable to give Gropecuntelane was a jocular alteration of this. But this is very unlikely to have happened independently about twenty times, making it much more probable that every Gropelane is a "cleaned-up" version of a Gropecuntelane. The gradual ‘cleaning-up’ process resulting in modern Grove Lane is well illustrated in the case of Wells: Scrase (n.d. [1989]: 105) records the following dates for the present Union Street:

- Gropecuntelane c1260-1333
- Grope Lane c1280-1835
- Grove Lane 1820-1865

The Parisian Rue de Poile-Con (Géraud 1837: 215) is possibly a punning alteration of an inn-name Pélican, the name in later records. The meaning of poile would presumably be ‘de-louse’ (AND: s.n. poiller), and we may compare Swylecunt dyche below. Allan and Burridge (2006: 52) are probably wrong to claim a Cunte St. in Bristol, and certainly wrong to associate the word with Cunetio, Kennett, and conduit.

Cuntelowe: Parwich. Hy.3 (1216-72) (PN Db 2: 405).

Countylowe: Hatton (Warwickshire); Cuntelowe 1221; Countylowe 1840 (PN Wa: 328,368).

The names are apparently identical and probably denote small hills with clefts. There is little hope of identifying the site of the Parwich feature in a very hilly area disturbed by mining. The same name perhaps occurs in the Scottish Countelowe 17th, Cuntelait 1691, recorded in the old earldom of Moray (Barrow 2008: 12), though Simon Taylor (private communication), suggests that it is rather of Celtic origin.

Cunliffe: there are five occurrences of this name. Perhaps only the first two are originally place-names, and the others are from personal names (the WW1 memorial at Rishton records two Cunliffes). Cundeclif below is directly comparable.

- Lower Cunliffe (Rishton, La; SD712307). These early forms are given in Ekwall (PN La: 73) and Kenyon (1984–5: 46): de Kuntecliue (Cumbecliue) 1246, de Cuntecliue n.d., de Cundecliue 1258, 1274, de Cunteclyue 1276, de Condeclyve 1288, de Cundeclif 13th, de Cundeclif 1277, 1388.
- Higher Cunliffe (Bank Hey, La; SD701305)
- Cunliffe House Farm (Langho, La; SD693341)
- Cunliffe’s Farm (Bolton, La; SD685125)
- Cunliffe House (Outseats, near Bamford, Db; SK216822; (PN Db 1: 157))

An OE personal name Cunda is recorded once as the name of a bishop in the Mercian charter S190 (AD 836). This is possibly a short form of one of the common names such as Cundbeald, Cundbeorht, Cundhelm etc., and is a continental form corresponding to OE Cūð, and so expected to be rare in Britain. Alternatively, it might be short for cundigeorn, a British name found in the Durham Liber Vitae (OET: 163). Ekwall considers the place-name Cunliffe to possibly contain Cunda, but there are several spellings with -t-, and therefore other origins should not be excluded. Ekwall further states: “‘Cunnus diaboli’ was a monkish name for a hollow in a rock through which people in Yorkshire used to crawl to be healed of sickness”. No authority for this claim is given; I have traced its source as follows. In Higgins (1878: 346) it is stated:

In India there are various clefts in the ground or rocks, (these are all nabi or navels,) into which devotees go, and from which when they come out they are regenerated or born again. There is a large one in Nepaul called Guhya-sthan used for this purpose. Here is a curious mixture of Greek and English found in India — the stan or stone of Γαῖα, Gaia the earth. There is a similar opening in several of the Celtic monuments of the British Isles, and particularly in the rocks at Brimham, near Harrowgate in Yorkshire, a place formerly much used by the Druids. See Celtic Druids [i.e. Higgins (1829: 225-6), where the same place is called Bramham]. If the hole were too small for the body, as Col. Wilford says, they put a hand or a leg in, and WITH FAITH it did as well. The early Christians called those things Cunni diaboli, and from the former of these words came the vulgar appellation for the membrum fæmineum in England.

The unscientific nature of Higgins’ writing will be apparent; I view these unsourced and unverifiable statements as almost worthless. His last etymology is wrong, and his ignorance is further displayed by a footnote claiming a similar anatomical origin for Penis-tone. Nevertheless this passage was cited by Liebrecht (1879: 398); Liebrecht was in turn cited by Nyrop (1890: 16); and Nyrop by Ekwall (PN La: 73). A very dubious and third-hand opinion has thus ended up in a reputable book.

Lower Cunliffe is at the base of a long straight ridge which is cut by several channels issuing from springs. There is also a spoil-heap from a mine (Figure 3). A particularly marked wooded gully immediately above the farmhouse may be the origin of the name.

Consideration of this name is complicated by the apparent existence of a variant cunliff of cundiff, cundreth ‘conduit, sewer’ (EDD: s.v. cundy). The word is either a direct descendant of “conduit” with parasitic -r-, later altered to -l-, or a compound with OE rið, ME rithe ‘stream’.

Shaecuntewelle: in or near Singlewell, Kent; de Savetuntewell 1275, Shaecuntewelle 1321, last noted 1350. The name is discussed by Wallenberg (1934: 101), who does not come to a conclusion. The name may be topographical (as Cuntewelle(wang) below), or possibly it is a site of humiliating punishment of women. There is further discussion of related folkloric issues in Jones (2002: 251).

Cundeclif in Nether Knutsford: Cundeclif c.1300. Cunteclyf 1358. The name is discussed by Dodgson (PN Ch 2: 76); Dodgson says this is a surname in the Knutsford district, and thus it is not certain that we have an original toponym here. Cunliffe (discussed above) is the same name.

Cuntebecsic: Hy3 (1216-72) (Caistor, Li) (PN L 2: 93).

Hardecunt: Hy3 (1216-72) (Stallingborough, Li) (PN L 2: 276).

Cuntewellewang: 1317 (Dexthorpe, Li) (Owen 1996: 101).

Cuntesik: 1348-9 (Nettleham, Li) (PN L 7). Cuntesik 1348-9, Cunn Sike Drain 1781, Cunsike Spring 1824.

Cuntland: 1384 (Hemswell, Li) (PN L 6: 182).

Scamcunt grene: 1457 (Brigsley, Li) (PN L 4: 64-5), (PN L 5: xvii).

This is a remarkable isolated cluster of six names in Lincolnshire. In most cases no exact feature be precisely identified, but a topographical interpretation is likely for all of them. Cuntewellewang in Dexthorpe is surely a description of the narrow wooded valley at TF 406 716 (Figure 4). Though no early record of any of these places survives, an origin in the Scandinavian word is very probable, and this group might be considered as evidence that ME cunte derives from Scandinavian. The generics in these names are ON bekkr ‘stream’, sík ‘ditch, channel’, and vangr ‘field’. The use of cunte as a generic in Hardecunt is unique. Cameron, Field, and Insley (PN L 5: xvii) suggest that the last name may contain ON skammr ‘short’; ME sc(h)ame ‘shame’ seems another possibility, though the spelling scam without -h- is unusual for a date as late as 1457. We may compare here OE scamlim ‘limb of shame’, a gloss for Ueretrum (Quinn 1956), and modern German Schamlippen, Dutch schaamlippen.

Cuntelacheker: 1307 in Fulstone (PN YW 2: 242). Presumably from læcc* ‘stream’, and kjarr ‘marsh’. There are narrow wooded gullies in this region (SE 177 098).

Swylecunt dyche in Macclesfield: le Swylecontdich 1396, Swylecuntliche 1397; last recorded 1620. The name is discussed in Dodgson (PN Ch 1: 120) and Dodgson (PN Ch 3: xiv), where Swillinditch is located from a Tithe Award map to "110[SJ]-907736, between Holly Bank Fm and Chester Rd, west of Clowes St". Note Cock Wood SJ 882 733.

Tapcuntlathe 1393 in Penrith: (PN Cu 1: 233). Presumably from ME tap(pen) ‘touch, tap’, and hlaþa ‘barn’.

Cuntemedewey, Cuntemed in Adstone (Nth): (no date) (AD: v.1, p.219, item B.20).

Doubtful cases

Cundall: Cundel DB. (PN YN: 181) suggests “... from the OE name Cunda or ... the ODan pers. name Kundi or from the OWScand by-name Kunta”. The first option probably occurs in Condicote (Gloucestershire) Cundicotan c.1052 (PN Gl 1: 216) and the last is not likely. There is nevertheless a topographical curiosity here - a wedge of land projects into the junction of the River Swale and the Cod Beck at Topcliffe Manor (SE 413 748), at which is Maiden Bower and Cock Lodge (Figure 5). The name Maiden Bower occurs as a calque on virginalis thalamus ‘the womb of the virgin Mary’ [7], so perhaps several related anatomical references occur here.

Quainton: this is considered “somewhat difficult” in Mawer and Stenton (PN Bk: 108); the authors prefer a derivation from a personal name in Cwēna. However, the DB spelling is Chentone. DB spells names with etymological /kw/- with Qu-, Qv-, Cu-, Ku-, or Hu-, but spellings in Che- and Chi- correspond to original /ke/- and /ki/- (Keelby, Keighley, Kercott, Kildale, Kinscote, and many other examples). Whatever the ultimate origin, I suggest influence from the neighbouring hill which contains a large cleft, so that the name now contains the Chaucerian euphemistic alteration quaint. The diphthong /ei/ first appears 1235 and then persists.

Hungery Cunt: this occurs on Roy’s military map of Scotland of c.1750 [8] in Cleish parish, Kinrossshire, at NT 134 979. However, I suspect this is a copyist’s error for the recurring derogatory name Hungeremout ‘Hunger ’em out’, which is discussed by Simon Taylor (2008: 277,355).

Conclusion: The Middle English Dictionary (MED) has eight quotations for the word cunte from the period 1325 to 1500, starting from the Hendyng Proverbs and extending to medical treatises, vocabularies, and to Chaucer. There are perhaps not many more than these eight in total. If so, the place-name corpus is much larger and therefore of considerable value for its linguistic evidence. The remaining questions belong to the field of sociolinguistics, and I leave these to better qualified persons.

Acknowledgments: I thank Richard Coates for comments on an earlier version of this article, and to Simon Taylor for information on Scottish names. I am very grateful to the anonymous referee who supplied several examples which I

[4] The German Cuntz is of no relevance here, being a hypocoristic from Conrad (earlier Kuonrad).

[5] Could there be a pun in Aldhelm’s Carmen de virginate (Lapidge and Rosier 1985): line 1159 is Mellea tunc roseis haerescunt labra labellis ‘the honeyed lips cling [“her is cunte”??] to his rosy lips’? This might seem so far-fetched as to be not worth considering, but Aldhelm is noted for his very obscure word-play.

[6] Could the mysterious fēder cuncan sīde of S872 (Kelly 1998: no.(21), pp.91-95) contain an error for the same word? Cf. (in) Winceburnan for Winterbourne (S1217).
